MONDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 19, 1859.

THE GALLEY SLAVES AT TOULON. It is not to be expected that one can speak of Toulon without saying a word of the gal-ley slaves or forcats. There are in the arse-nal and yard 4,500, who do all the heavy work. They drag the materials about, and some are employed in sawing timber. The worst are attached in couples by heavy chains passing round the ankles and waists, and linked together. The better behaved are allowed to go singly, ironed in the same way. with the exception of the connecting chain. They are clothed in canvass trousers and shirts, branded with their numbers, and a woollen jacket. Those who are condemned for life wear a long green woolen peakless cap, something like a nighteap with the top cut off, and made square. On the front of the cap is a tin plate with the number of the wearer punched out. The convicts who are condemned for a number of years are distingushed from the others by red caps, and those who have been more than once to the Bagne by yellow sleeves to their jackets.

Their faces, close shaven, bronzed by exposure to the sun, and brutalized by crime, are fearful to behold, and their repulsive appearance is heightened by their hair being notched short, in lines running round the head, in order to facilitate their recognition should they escape. At night they lie down on inclined lengths of planking, without mattress or covering, in twenties, or thirties, and an iron rod is run through the leg chains of each, so that no one can move without the rest .-Their food consists of brown bread, not secured by the bonds of the purchaser, and a deed all wheaten flour, soup, and haricots et feres, beans. No wine or tobacco is allowed, but the convicts are permitted to receive 10f. a month from their friends, with which they may purchase any eatable they please. The greatest and most degrading punishment, which must also be the greatest obstacle to reformation, is chaining the men in couples. Youths over sixteen may be seen chained to old men tained with every vice.

Waking or sleeping the campagnons de chaine are never separated until freedom or death removes one of them. In spite of the hideous costume and revolting appearance of the forcats there were some who still exhibited traces of their position, whose gentility, so to speak, pierced through their convict garb. One in particular, standing nearly six feet high, and who intently watched the arrival of wounded French soldiers from Italy, struck me on account of the grace with which he moved, bowing to the guardians passing by, although his actions were accompanied by the horrid clanking of his chains. At the time of my visit I was told that there were then among the forcats Colonel de Cercy, who commanded a regi-ment at Marseilles in 1851, who was charged with the execution of the coup'd etat in his town, and who was subsequently convicted of escroquerie; Capt. Doineau, Chef d'un bureau Arab, convicted of having conspired to murder an Arab chief; Lieut. de Mercy, conviction of the convict ted of having unfairly and with premeditation slain another officer when tipsy in a duel; the chief army accountant (chef' comp blale,) who was sent to the Crimea, and the two managers of the bank of Toulon, and six abbes (and there are more who manage to keep their former calling secret.)

An eminent painter is chained to a dis-tinguished member of the Paris bar, and between them they keep the accounts of one department of the prison, while of lawyers and notaries there is no end. Among the forcuts are men of all nations, as of all ranks of any criminal intention. He has recently been brought to Toulon from Rochefort-is comsumptive, and not allowed to wear flannel, although permitted to do so in Roche fort. There is also a hazy rumor of a British peer of the realm being among the forcats, but as no one has ever seen him it may be dismissed as a myth. To the present Government of France is due the merit of endeavoring to deal with the great social evil, the Bagnes, where vice stagnates and grows more hideous, to be again let loose on society. Penal settlements have been formed in Africa and French Guiana, to which some of the convicts have been removed. Toulon is now the only Bagne; those of Rochefort and Brest have been abolished, but still the work goes on very slowly.

Three cargoes of 500 each have been shipped off, yet their places are nearly all filled up by new arrivals. Moreover, it would appear that the forcats cannot be legally compelled to go unless they choose. They were condemned to hard labor in the dockyards and arsenals of the State, and not to transportation. To coax them to go abroad, they are promised that on their arrival they shall be relieved of their chains and allowed the free use of their limbs. But so great is their dread of Lambessa and Cayenne, and the craven fear of death, that they prefer the fetters and horrors of the Bagne at Toulon to comparative independence at these two French colonies. As one of their guardians characterized them, "Tous ces assassins et roleurs sont si laches ils ont pour de mourir.' -Times' Correspondent.
